A mi me gusta mas la linea, mas que nada porque una vez que la dominas un poco las figuras parece que tienen mas sentido y explicación. La cubana esta bien para bailar en rueda pero que creo que la riqueza y la elegancia de la linea es superior.

En general nadie baila un estilo único a menos que se empeñe en un ejercicio de purismo, ya que la tendencia de los bailarines a aumentar el repertorio de figuras o de variaciones rítmicas (taps, slows, flicks...) difumina las diferencias entre Los Angeles, Salsa-Mambo, Miami, Colombiano, y Cubano/Casino que comparten el mismo ritmo ya se baile en 1, en 2 o en 3.

Mi preferencia personal está por mezclar Los Angeles y Colombiano en 3 (tiempo que también prefiero para el Mambo), alternando slows con flicks, ocasionalmente heel taps y raramente toe taps.

Y dan para mucho más que sólo bailar rueda, que personalmente no me atrae.

Lo poco que he podido ver de Salsa en línea no me ha parecido ni más fundamentado ni más elegante, especialmente en lo que se refiere a la conducción, pero estoy abierto a que el futuro me sorprenda.

No he tenido oportunidad de ver bailar estilos New York o Puerto Rico, que usan una interpretación rítmica distinta de los anteriores con el break en el segundo paso de cada tres en vez de en el primero. Resulta un ritmo en 1 pero con el break en 2. Interesante.

Otra interpretación rítmica curiosa (y tradicional) creo que es la de Clave, que alterna ritmos de 2 y 4 pasos en vez de 3 y 3. Sólo para música tradicional, no comercial.

Saludos y que lo bailéis bien.

Un slow es un paso lento en dos tiempos/beats, en la salsa el último de cada ritmo básico (QQS: rápido-rápido-lento), en contraposición a la descripción simplificada común de 123-pausa o 234-pausa o 341-pausa (ritmo QQQ-pausa) que no tiene en cuenta la transferencia progresiva de peso ni el movimiento corporal que acompañan a una auténtica acción "slow".

Un tap es un toque en el suelo con el pie sin transferencia de peso a ese mismo pie (así que no es un paso) para a continuación levantarlo más o menos rápidamente antes de ejecutar el paso definitivo. Tiene el efecto secundario de acortar el tiempo de la transferencia de peso de la acción slow previa. Se suele hacer de medio tiempo/beat a un tiempo/beat antes del break en las figuras más básicas (en posición enfrentada).

Un flick es una elevación de rodilla antes de un paso tal como es habitual en Rock'n Roll, y también acorta la transferencia de peso previa. Su ejecución en salsa consume normalmente medio tiempo/beat justo antes del paso. Puede ser precedido por un tap.

Espero que sea de ayuda.B)

Es posible que sí hayas visto flicks; en algunos estilos de salsa, especialmente en la rueda, se ejecutan de vez en cuando sonoras pisadas para las que antes se ha elevado la pierna en un flick.

Aunque por supuesto el posado del pie tras un flick puede ser suave y así es como lo prefiero.

La elevación de la rodilla no tiene por que ser al nivel de la cintura rayando la acrobacia, bastan unos centímetros, lo justo para que el pie se despegue visiblemente del suelo.

No los suelo hacer. Algun que otro tap si, sobre todo si el tema es lento y estoy bailando cubano.

Hay algunos temas lentos que se prestan más para la línea. En general suelo combinar línea y cubano porque hay figuras que interpretativamente vienen bien en cualquiera de los dos estilos.

Y sobre todo, me encanta bailar On2. La pena es que lo suelo hacer solo porque es fácil que tu pareja se vaya al 1 con facilidad y ya no bailas tan cómodo pendiente de la marca del tiempo a la chica.

Yo creo que a la gente que empieza le cuesta menos bailar en rueda pues se ayudan unos a otros. Lo que pasa es que luego para bailar en pareja se hace complicado porque no hay casi referencias de direcciones y eso.

La salsa en línea tiene la ventaja de que la técnica está mas clara y las direcciones y las conducciones, aunque mas complicadas estan mas estructuradas y para el que empieza todo lo que sea claro está bien. Eso si, si hay que bailar una salsa rápida con la línea te puedes morir...
